

Loves me, Loves me not?

When it comes to flowers and the who's who in the area of super creative floral design, my pick is Anna Wilson of the bridal store Something Blue Dress House and her newly expanded floral division, Weeds! Anna says, "Anytime you look at a patch of weeds, there is always one single beautiful flower growing amidst the scraggly chaos, which symbolizes growth, hope and strength. The Weeds studio location will be up and running, along with the web site by October 2007.

Anna was formerly Vice President of West Coast Operations for Jane Carroll, Inc., a celebrated east coast floral and event design company, Anna struck out early on her own, and what a mark she makes in the floral world.

At Colours, we are expected to deliver cutting-edge design, and it does not stop at the furnishings. In my opinion, a job isn't complete until the floral and plant scape have been selected and determined.

The styling you receive from Anna Wilson is fresh and deliberate in its execution. Whether it is Euro styling or simply modern presentation, this is our choice stylist in florals.

The same is true of sending flowers. However, this isn't your Aunt Bessie's florist. Individual deliveries start at approximately $150 and no two are alike. Anna specializes in weekly floral accounts for both residential and corporate settings and intimate events. I have never been let down by the end result.

I never knew roses could look so divine!
